Abstract

In a distributed processing system of two or more interconnected CPUs or computers, each having an operating system, wherein different processes are assigned to particular CPUs in a static manner for workload distribution, a novel virtual link handler (VLH) comprising shadow processes and driver adapters allow processes resident of and operating on a CPU or computer to exchange signals with processes resident of and operating on other CPUs.

(Fig. 2)